Cruising the fjords of British Columbia

Brown bear with cub. Susie Green

One of the Tsimshians' myths says that "Raven made one in every ten bears white to remind the people of the time when glaciers covered this land". The Tsimshian speaking people attribute the white kermode bears with supernatural powers, hence they are also known as the "Spirit Bear", a name that suits their apparition-like presence. The rare white kermode, a subspecies of the black bear, is wild, elusive and little known to North Americans other than the Tsimshian-speaking people of the north coast of British Columbia. These people have shared territory for thousands of years with the kermode bear.

Princess Royal Island, Gribbell Island and other nearby islands off the north coast of British Columbia, are home to a healthy population of Spirit Bears. The island is a perfect bear habitat with its old-growth hemlock and cedar forest; tidewater estuaries rich with grasses, roots and berries; and sparkling streams of spawning salmon which bring the bears down from the hills to gather along the streams. The surrounding mountains and rainforest are home to grizzly bears, wolves, wolverines, black bears, deer and beaver. Though this trip is called Quest for the Spirit Bear, you will have excellent chances to see and photograph black bears, brown bears, humpback whales and Orcas.

We'll explore aboard a comfortable 68' ketch which accommodates up to 14 people in eight cabins. The yacht is crewed by an experienced staff and is a comfortable base. Meals are eaten on board with the exception of some picnic lunches while exploring the heart of the rainforest. A zodiac is used to transfer people to shore and there are kayaks in which you can explore on your own.

Bear viewing stands provide access to some of the best bear watching in the world. This is a truly unique adventure for photographers and naturalists alike!

Lodge-based Tour of the Great Bear Rainforest

All photos Randy Green

The Great Bear Rainforest of British Columbia is the largest intact piece of temperate rainforest left on the planet. Grizzly bears, black bears, the Kermode bear (Spirit Bear), Orcas, humpback, coastal wolves and a variety of other species call this home.

Spirit Bear Lodge is located in Klemtu in the heart of the Great Bear Rainforest. Located 280 nautical miles north of Vancouver, BC. Klemtu is a Kitasoo/Xai/Xais fishing village centrally located for access to the best bear viewing areas. First Nations people own and operate the lodge where many of the guides are born and raised in Klemtu having exclusive access to the recently created Spirit Bear Conservancy. Community Elders often tell family stories while driving the skiffs on your Quest for the Spirit Bear.

The lodge was built in 2007 offering 12 rooms with private bath rooms. This is a great alternative for those guests that want to come back daily to private land based rooms.

Guests depart Vancouver's South terminal and fly to Bella Bella, BC where they are met and taken to the water taxi terminal for the 90 minute boat ride to Klemtu and the Spirit Bear Lodge.

After you settle in, you'll enjoy a buffet dinner, followed by an orientation and evening presentation on coastal ecology.

Each day includes one of several guided activities. You'll travel by boat, to one of many estuaries to look for grizzly bears, black bears, wolves, eagles, and, with luck, the shy spirit bear. Depending on the time of year, you may also have the option of a humpback whale watching trip.

Others excursions include sea kayaking, or a day trip to the UNESCO World Heritage site candidate Dis'ju Historic Long House.
